Mr. Chamberlain was brought to his London house yesterday from Highbury, his place near Birmingham. Since his return from abroad he has shown increasing loss of nervous and mental power, and it was desired to have him within reach of the best medical advice that London can afford. Austin Chamberlain, his son, was with him all day, but inquiry at Mr. Chamberlain's residence got only the reply that he bore the journey well."

Baseball. Edmonton Took Three

(Special to The Chronicle)
Calgary, June 19.—The game here tonight was exceedingly close and interesting, and eleven innings had to be played to decide it. Calgary scored a single in the first and Edmonton got even in the third. In the fourth Calgary got ahead—again and kept the lead until the ninth, when Edmonton made the score two all. In the tenth there was nothing doing, but in the eleventh the Capitals notched up three and Calgary could do nothing. Barnstead did the twisting for Calgary and kept the hits down pretty well until the eleventh. Barnstead for Edmonton pitched a good steady game, and on the whole, received good support. Quinn had his hand badly hurt in the sixth in catching a nasty one from Barnstead.

Score by innings:
Edmonton 9 0 10 0 0 10 0 1 0 5.
Calgary 10 0 0 10 0 0 0 0 2 2.

CURRENT COMMENT.

At the annual assembly of the various religious denominations of Canada within the past week or two, graft and corruption received particular attention and a number of resolutions were passed, calling for a better state of affairs.

It is fitting that this question should be taken up by the church, which do a great deal towards the bettering of conditions. This fact was recognized by one of the speakers at the Anglican synod at Toronto, where the following resolution was passed—

"That it is the conviction of this Synod that great purification of politics, of financial, social and business methods of this country is imperatively demanded today, and that the Church, her bishops, clergy and laymen should take a leading part in the immediate improvement of the present deplorable state of affairs."

The resolution was introduced by Mr. N. F. Davidson, who said, in presenting it, that the clergymen are not intimately acquainted with the political, moral and social life of the very people to whom they preach Sunday after Sunday—and further that the time has come when preachers should abandon generalities and deal with abuses as they exist in their particular localities.

Mr. Davidson's speech is referred to by the Winnipeg Tribune as follows: "This is plain speaking—but not too plain. Besides it is sound common sense and well deserved."

People and newspapers constantly ask why it is that the churches are losing their influence with the people.

If anyone will stop to think, he will see that the loss of influence is the logical and inevitable result of lack of courage and aggressiveness, too much dealing in generalities, and platitudes in the pulpit and a reluctance to come out point blank and assume a commanding position as critic and sincere adviser.

In hundreds of pulpits throughout the country preachers are striving too hard to please to be able to give any attention to the legitimate work of instructing and reproving.

No healthy man can have respect for another who makes it obvious that he fears to run the risk of offending him.

What influence has any newspaper that tries to make itself popular by avoiding plain speaking, by indulging in "howevers," "nevertheless," "but on the other hand," "something should be done," etc? None—absolutely none.

Then how can a church exercise a real and wholesome influence, when its preachers convince the people that they know no fear, have no hope of favor and have but one duty to perform—outpost out evil wherever it may be found and to lead their people to a higher moral, social and political life?

If they perform this duty fearlessly and honestly, they can well afford to endure the abuse of angry politicians and parishioners who may be brought to task for their insincerity, hypocrisy or other faults.

When this duty is properly performed, we shall hear no more complaints of the Church's loss of influence.

The resolution adopted by the Anglican Synod at Toronto, is one that every church in the country might profitably ponder.

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

The amendments of the British North America Act proposed in a series of resolutions by the Canadian parliament are about to receive the necessary sanction of the British parliament. The effect of the amendments is to change to some extent the relations between the provinces and the Dominion, chiefly in the direction of diverting some of the general revenue of the country to the provincial exchequers.

No doubt there is something anomalous in any matters affecting only the internal affairs of Canada requiring to pass the British parliament. But then, the British constitution is an anomaly, in the strictest sense of the word, from beginning to end. And yet how admirably it works. An amendment to the Canadian constitution is put through in little more than six months with eleven inter-related governments affected. There is no fuss made about it, a few lines in the newspapers chronicle that it has been done. That is all. Yet when we come to look at it there is something very fine in it. The simplicity of it does not, in any hazard government; it is the supreme expression of the instinct of self-government, brought to a higher efficiency in the British Empire than anywhere else. The method of it is simply logical application of the principle of responsible government. The British parliament occupies in these relations a position somewhat analogous to that of the crown in other affairs. The King must accept the advice of his ministers, and the British parliament, though technically paramount must accept the advice of the Canadian government, provided of course that no imperial complications are involved. When we consider that the United States is still wearing the constitutional clothes of its infancy and that all efforts to alter them fit seem to be unavailing, we have great reason to be thankful.

One province, British Columbia, protested against the amendments as they stand or stood. The interesting point is not the justice or injustice of British Columbia's case, but the fact that a provincial government intervened. At the first blush this looks like a direct infringement of the principle of responsible government. But it was not. Mr. Melville knew as well as anybody else, that British Columbia's case must be fought out on the Canadian field. He went to London not to plead the merits of his case, but to prevent an estoppel being pleaded against him when he brought his case before the court of competent jurisdiction. The words "final" and "unalterable" he protested against. The words were eliminated, and what is better, the idea of finality has been definitely negated. We therefore owe it to Mr. Melville that the fundamental principle of the British constitution has been brought into clear relief in our affairs. It is that while constitutional relations are not to be lightly interfered with, there is nothing specially sacrosanct in a written constitution, and nothing unalterable which changed conditions may have made burdensome. There is a danger in a country's being "bound in with ink, blots and rotten parchment bonds."

"My dear, will it bother you if I ask a question about our club bookkeeping? You know I'm treasurer."

"No. Delighted, I'm sure."

"Well, we gave a charity evening for the benefit of the Old Ladies' home. It cost our club $200, and we only took in $200. Now I figure it out that the old ladies owe us $50. Am I right?"

"Life."

"Approximately Successful."

"Not exactly. But he gave him a 'side one'."

WATER AS A BEVERAGE

Flatfoot After an Apple and Cocktail

After a Peppermint Drop. "Water is the finest drink in the world," said the chronicler in little things, "but not every one knows how to get the most enjoyment out of drinking it."

"For instance, water should never be drunk immediately after an apple has been eaten, for as a beverage it then has a taste more flat and insipid than as if it had been taken from a cold teakettle."

"On the other hand, there is nothing to my mind that makes water taste more cool and refreshing (not counting actual thirst) than to eat a peppermint drop before taking a drink of it."

"And, while peppermint stands at the head, a drink of water is particularly and noticeably good after any water or liqueur. Peppermint, on the other hand, takes all the animation out of a subsequent swallow of water."

"Nor do bread and water go well together. The water takes the sweetness out of the bread, and the bread takes the liveliness out of the water and makes it flat beyond degree."

"The trust who first bit upon bread and water as a prison fare of punishment knew his business."

"The enjoyment of a drink of water varies, too, with what you drink it from. You would not offer to a sick person a drink of water in a cup, but rather in a glass, the thinner the better. The fact that the water itself is all its liquid clearness is present to the sense of sight stimulates an expectation that is gratified along with the sense of taste."

"I have frequently observed men about to drink some other beverage than water, and it appears to be a very common habit with them to regard the liquid steadily for some seconds before swallowing it, often holding it on a level with their eyes in order to see it as clearly as possible."

"Surely this lesson should not be lost upon the man who knows that there is no drink like water. While you are drinking it enjoy it."

"For my own part, I like water from a big dipper even better than from a thin tumbler, but best of all drinking dishes for me is a newly made direct dipper, all the better if I have made it myself."

"Dip a full dipper from the center of the building's spout, take a look to see how limpid it is against the clean yellow freshness of the dripping dipper, put your lips to the water itself, and then take one of the sweetest gifts the gods provide."

Ginger of West Point.

The man who graduated at the foot of the class that year (1860) had been six years at the Point and had just passed through at last—Harold E. Portland, commonly known as Ginger on account of his hair being the exact color of ground ginger. Portland had distinguished himself well reciting to Captain Benton in obedience by a remarkable answer to the question, "Mr. Portland, how many pieces will a twelve inch shell burst into?" the average number having been determined well by experiment. Ginger threw his eyes, much to the surprise, but very blue, on the floor and deliberated awhile. Then slowly lifting them to a point near the ceiling over Captain Benton's head, still deeply reflecting, he finally responded, "Not less than 121." General Morris Schaff in Atlantic.

Largest Crab.

In the American Museum of Natural History in New York is a wonder of marine life. It is a gigantic Japanese crab, measuring twelve feet across, making it the largest in the world. The specimen is a type of the spider crab, which inhabits the waters of the group of islands forming the empire of Japan. The body portion of the crab is the size of a half bushel measure, while its great arms could easily encircle the figure of a man. Its legs resemble poles and are extremely elastic, and if struck into one line they would reach to the top of a four story apartment building.

And Then He Ran.

"Did any man ever tell you," asked Mr. Hennes, as he edged toward the door, "that you were the sweetest and most beautiful woman in the world?" "No," replied his wife.
